This report presents findings of a study of the policy context around higher education institution (HEI) mobility in eight APEC economies â China, Indonesia, Malaysia, Mexico, Peru, the Philippines, Singapore and Viet Nam. The report provides insights into different policy contexts gathered from desktop research and from interviews with 68 participants. These all had direct involvement in HEI mobility in the eight economies in the study, including through senior positions in ministries of education, in bodies aligned to ministries, in accreditation and quality assurance agencies, and in foreign and local HEIs. The report identifies regulations, practices, policies, legislative contexts and interpretations, which both facilitate and limit the mobility of HEIs in each economy. It summarises key trends across the eight economies and the major domestic imperatives they respond to, and highlights significant differences in approach among them. The report indicates the impact these policy contexts have on establishing and operating collaborative programmes and the campuses of foreign HEIs. It also presents one or more examples of HEI mobility in each economy. Leveraging insights gained

While acknowledging the very significant differences between APEC economies and their respective higher education systems, the report identifies ways in which mutual the demands imposed on diplomats are changing quite radically, and many foreign ministries feel they are being left behind, there is a need to understand the various forces that are affecting the profession. Diplomacy remains a salient activity in today's world in which the basic authoritative actor is still the state. At the same time, in some respects the practice of diplomacy is undergoing significant, even radical, changes to the context, tools, actors and domain of the trade. These changes spring from the changing nature of the state, the changing nature of the world order, and the interplay between them. One way of describing this is to say

Read Free Apec As An Insution Multilateral that we are seeing increased interaction between two forms of diplomacy, 'club diplomacy' and 'network diplomacy'. The former is based on a small number of players, a highly hierarchical structure, based largely on written communication and on low transparency; the latter is based on a much larger number of players
