Already a classic of war reporting and now reissued as a Grove Press paperback, Black Hawk Down is Mark Bowden ' s brilliant account of the longest sustained firefight involving American troops since the Vietnam War. On October 3, 1993, about a hundred elite U.S. soldiers were dropped by helicopter into the teeming market in the heart of Mogadishu, Somalia. Their mission was to abduct two top lieutenants of a Somali warlord and return to base. It was supposed to take an hour. Instead, they found themselves pinned down through a long and terrible night fighting against thousands of heavily armed Somalis. The following morning, eighteen Americans were dead and more than seventy had been badly wounded.

Drawing on interviews from both sides, army records, audiotapes, and videos (some of the material is still classified), Bowden ' s minute-by-minute narrative is one of the most exciting accounts of modern combat ever written—a riveting story that captures the heroism, courage, and brutality of battle.

Trust me. Two simple words that spun Jason Eric Smith's life wildly out of control. What would you do if you woke up one morning and heard a voice in your head that wasn't your own? How would you handle it if an angel started giving you advice on how to live your life? What would you do if the angel started asking you to put yourself in harms way in order to help others? These are the questions that Jason faced throughout the last few months of his life. Read his personal journal as he documents his fascinating tale of connecting with a higher power.

Through the use of careful explanation and examples, Berry demonstrates how to consider whether the assumptions of multiple regression are actually satisfied in a particular research project. Beginning with a brief review of the regression assumptions as they are typically presented in text books, he moves on to explore in detail the substantive meaning of each assumption; for example, lack of measurement error, absence of specification error, linearity, homoscedasticity, and lack of auto-
