Johannes Tincoris - The Art and Popular Culture Encyclopedia
JOHANNES TINCORIS ( c. 1435–1511) is widely acknowledged as one of the most important writers on music of the late Middle Ages and early Renaissance. His twelve Latin treatises demonstrate not only an exceptional technical command of the intellectually demanding musical notation and theory of the time, but also an intimate acquaintance with contemporary compositional practice, derived from a close knowledge of the composers of his day and their music, both in northern Europe, where he ...

It is here that Tincoris made his famous claim that music had so vastly increased in scope since the 1430s that it seemed to have become a new art-an art that originated in England and was subsequently adopted by French composers. These developments are widely thought to have inaugurated the era of the Renaissance in music.

Johannes Tincoris and the ' New Art ' Rob C. Wegman 2003-05-01 00:00:00 Two well known passages from the treatises of Johannes Tincoris have often been cited in support of the contention that the 1430s marked the beginning of the musical Renaissance. A review of the passages in question indicates that Tincoris's claims about the recent musical past were so thoroughly shaped by contemporary models of historical interpretation that it is difficult to disentangle hard facts from his ...

Tincoris, Johannes
Johannes Tincoris, in his Liber de arte contrapunctiof 1477, remarked on recent developments in the art of music and placed Johannes Ockeghem at the head of an exalted list of composers whose works exuded divine sweetness: Although it seems beyond belief, there does not exist a single piece of music, not composed within the last forty years, that is regarded by the learned as worth hearing.

The definitive collection of great writings on music from ancient Greece through the twentieth century.

Kirkman sheds new light on the polyphonic Mass, exploring the hidden meanings within its music and its legacy today.

The study of music from the early Middle Ages to end of the seventeenth century.

In the Middle Ages, liturgies, books, song, architecture and poetry were performed as collaborative activities in which performers and audience together realized their work anew. Essays by leading scholars analyse how the medieval arts invited and delighted in collaborative performances designed to persuade. The essays cast fresh light on subjects ranging from pilgrim processions within Chartres Cathedral, to polyphonic song, and the 'rhetoric of silence' perfected by the Cistercians. Rhetoric is defined broadly in this book to encompass its relationship to its sister arts of music, architecture, and painting, all of which use materials and media in addition to words, sometimes altogether without words. Contributors have concentrated on those aspects of formal rhetoric that are performative in nature, the sound, gesture, and facial expressions of persuasive speech in action. Delivery (performance) is shown to be at the heart of rhetoric, that aspect of it which is indeed beyond words.
