manuscripts are still sometimes called "miscellanies", a term relating to the texts only. The codicological difference is important for reconstructing why and how these manuscripts which in many cases resemble (or contain) a small library were produced and used.

Contributions on the manuscript cultures of China, India, Africa, the Islamic world and European traditions lead not only to the conclusion that "one-volume libraries" have been produced in many manuscript cultures, but allow also for the identification of certain types of uses.

One purpose of this report is to present a mathematical procedure which can be used to study and compare various numerical methods for integrating ordinary differential equations.

This procedure is relatively simple, mathematically rigorous, and of such a nature that matters of interest in digital computations, such as machine memory and running time, can be weighed against the accuracy and stability provided by the method under consideration. Briefly, the procedure is as follows: (1) Find a single differential equation that is sufficiently representative (this is fully defined in the report) of an arbitrary number of Another purpose is to use the procedure just described to analyze a variety of numerical methods, ranging from classical, predictor-corrector systems to Runge-Kutta techniques and including various combinations of the two.

Nystrom Unit 8
