You have found the book to help you survive your whole high school and college years! Have you ever had a essay paper due and just had nothing...no ideas, nowhere to begin, nowhere to start...just staring at a blank screen or piece of paper? This book is here to help you find a topic to write on and even before that, show you the steps you need to take so you don't waste your time before you even begin starting your research and writing your paper. You will find the following categories with tons of topics in each: -Animal, Energy, and Environment -Business -Crime and Law -Drug and Drug Abuse -Education -Family and Children issues -Government and Political Issues -Health -Media and Communications -Psychology -Religion -Science and Technology -Social Issues -Terrorism -Women and Gender -World Issues Don't worry if you don't see your specific category, because it could be a topic. Even if it isn't, these topics are great starting points to add another topic to one you currently have and/or are maybe struggling with. It could also give you ideas on where to take a topic if you already have one chosen. Usually combining two topics can lead to a more in-depth and focused research paper, but it really depends on what your assignment asks for. In addition there are over 30 questions to help focus your research, find your supporting points, and help to begin your paper and write your thesis. No topic and no supporting points equal no thesis, no research paper and the clock is tick tick ticking. There are also quick links within the e-book to help you navigate and jump around within the categories with ease and convenience. If you decide you want to change topics. This book will be a great addition to help any student who needs help finding a research topic and starting their paper!

This volume contains the proceedings of a workshop held at Drexel University from September 1 to September 3, 1980, under the joint auspices of Drexel University, The University of Tennessee and Vanderbilt University. The workshop dealt with subjects of topical importance to the nuclear physics community: high spin phenomena, heavy ion reactions, transfer reactions, microscopic theories of nuclear structure and the interacting boson model, and miscellaneous topics. This pro ceedings contains all of the invited papers plus short manuscripts expanding on the materials of the invited papers. A total of about 85 participants came to the workshop. The format of the conference was kept informal on purpose, so as to facilitate the discussions. Unfortunately, these discussions, at times intense, could not be included in this volume due to the lack of secretarial help during the meeting. A great deal of current information was exchanged during the conference. However, the full impact of a conference can only be realized when the proceedings have been published and read by par ticipants as well as other colleagues in this field of physics who were not in attendance. We sincerely hope that these proceedings will be useful in this regard.

The Legacy of Mesoamerica: History and Culture of a Native American Civilization summarizes and integrates information on the origins, historical development, and current situations of the indigenous peoples of Mesoamerica. It describes their contributions from the development of Mesoamerican Civilization through 20th century and their influence in the world community. For courses on Mesoamerica (Middle America) taught in departments of anthropology, history, and Latin American Studies.

Our Research Topic section entitled, "Nature and the environment: The psychology of its benefits and its protection" will have two main lines. The first line of articles will center upon cutting-edge research showing how interacting with nature, can affect health, well-being, and overall improve cognition and affect. Articles in this line will stress in what ways nature can improve psychological functioning and health and also discuss the theories and evidence as to why nature can improve psychological functioning. For this line, we welcome submission of articles that discuss the psychological, health and well-being benefits from interacting with nature as well as submissions that focus on theoretical considerations and underlying mechanisms that lead to the restorative effects of interacting with nature. Given that nature can have a positive impact on psychological functioning and overall health, it is also important to understand the variables that facilitate people's recognition of environmental issues that can help foster a more positive attitude towards the preservation of nature. This brings us to the second line of articles which will center upon the psychological mechanisms that make individuals more or less likely to accept the seriousness of environmental challenges such as climate change. Given the new cutting-edge research in this field we may be able to make individuals more proactive in the protection of the environment and more accepting of policy measures required to mitigate climate change. We see this research topic as a way for psychological scientists to contribute substantially to an important area of public debate and policy. For this line we welcome articles that will focus on ways in which people respond to various framings of policy relevant information and how morality may play into the individuals policy views that center on climate change and environmental protection.
